A major problem would be in overcoming your stubborn resistance to change. Friends consider you to be conservative; others say you are obstinate. In either case, you resist change until you can see it make sense based on practical considerations. You always find a way to accumulate what you need for physical needs. Too often they become more important than your other needs. You take excellent care of your body and personal surroundings.

You insist on making your own choices about your goals and your life styles. Your determination and stubborn self-reliance often lead you into confrontations with parents, higher-ups, and friends who feel that they know better what you should do and how you should do it. You need your freedom of choice more than you need their approval. Above all, you must feel that you are in control of your circumstances.

You are energetic in your pursuit of a wide range of interests. These interests are usually focused on social issues rather than personal pursuits. In fact, you are annoyingly aloof when it comes to personal relationships. It is difficult for you to share your inner life with someone else. That's because you are hardly aware of your own inner feelings. They are less interesting to you than what's going on out in the "real world". That's where the action is, and that's where you want to be! Your interest and dedication come to life when you can link up with some global cause. You thrive on the causes that promise to bring about the greatest social change. Chances are good that you are into energy, ecology, and the nuclear threat. Your involvements will not include antisocial behavior since you have a strong need to maintain the appearance of respectability. That goes hand in hand with your need for recognition of your natural leadership abilities. These leadership abilities are often recognized and rewarded soon after you have had the opportunity to prove them.

Count of Modal Houses:

Cadent Houses	1	Angular Houses	4
Succedent Houses	6

You are a chameleon, who can change colors to suit any surrounding or circumstance. Your motto is "I'd rather switch than fight." The ease with which you recall past experiences, gives you the distinct advantage of having all that experience at your fingertips, for solving present problems. At best, your friends think of you as versatile, or perhaps changeable. At worst, they are more likely to call you unreliable. With your intellectual outlook, you prefer to think of yourself as flexible and resourceful. You have the knack for keeping things moving and stepping in to resolve difficulties as they arise between others. That's because of your inner need for a harmonious environment.

Your only problem is that you find it hard to accept responsibility. Perhaps that's because you spend so much time enjoying memories of the past, you resent the time it would take to deal with the problems of the future.
